Subject: 05HUNT-Initiative Prohibiting Shooting Bears/Wolves from Air

A hunting association wrote me a pretty detailed letter asking that I withdraw 05HUNT from the 08 Primary ballot given the legislature's passage of a bill specific to game that is on the governor's desk, I believe. The group says that under the new definitions in the bill, the initiative language proposes an appropriation of a state resource (there's that issue again ☺) and that the initiative should be pulled because it is not a proper subject for the ballot. I have asked Law to review this issue— Privileged or Personal Material Redacted

I called her. She made it sound like she's been waiting for an answer from me on abortion issues in expanded session- I told her I thought she was getting back to me to share her plan to skip judicial committee and deal with both bills successfully via a different path than where she went during regular session. She said "I thought I told you I'd send them right to State Affairs". I asked if Hollis would protest, she said Hollis "doesn't have any power, he can't stop me".

She also said something I don't agree with: that the more issues in the call, the better. So abortion, energy relief and AGIA all at once is the way to go, in her mind. Says it'll be too expensive to have addl sessions, and wants to keep everyone around during AGIA so put more on their plate.

I agree that it makes sense to put AGIA and energy relief together, but not abortion. Again, I want the abortion bills dealt with, perhaps right after AGIA? But not during.

MESSAGE:

Governor,

I just finished reading the Joel Davidson (Catholic News Service) article in our diocesan newspaper (The Dialog) about your fifth child. May God bless you and your husband for bringing another life into the world. I know I live in Delaware, but the very least I can do is support your kind and loving efforts with prayer and positive thoughts.

My sister was born with a mental defect that has not hindered her efforts to be a productive member of her community and an inspiration to all of us in her family. The sacrifices my parents made while she was growing up and the fighting efforts they made for her when she reached adulthood were not lost on me and my other sister and brother. Perhaps its God's way of helping us grow in ways that those not touched by her will never grow. Pride, selfishness, jealousy, animosity and other non-productive and hurtful feelings seem to be just so petty when you realize the efforts that she has to put in just to get through each day. It's a blessing and it makes me understand even more that every life is precious and is worth living (not to mention respecting).

I appreciate what you and your husband have done. You're a very special couple (and family) and the people of Alaska are lucky to have you. We could use a little more of what you bring to the table in my own area including Maryland, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. My prayers are with you.

I sent the attached letter in the mail but want Governor Palin to see it as soon as possible. Mike from my office called your office and was told they could not give out the Governor's email address and that emailing it to you would be the fastest way to get it to Governor Palin. Please ensure that she sees it as soon as possible.

Thanks for all your help.

This was her 4th child, plus she has one step daughter. They range in age from 18 down to 7 months. All the children dearly love our Nikolas. We truly are blessed with all of them. I am so proud of my daughter for being such a wonderful Mother. My hope and prayer for you and your family is to be thankful for what the Lord gives....and from the article... I believe you are. Please consider supporting access to health care for all Alaskans, no matter how old they are or where they live. As a cancer patient, 72 years old, without Medicare, we would have lost our savings. We do have a secondary insurance for which I am grateful but some people cannot afford a secondary insurance due to the high cost of insurance.

Thank you for your attention to this very important issue. Kaye F. Hard

I think Janice can refine our distribution list to make sure it only includes commissioners and Governor's staff--any support staff for commissioners or Governor's staff should be removed. It narrows the scope of who could be leaking emails, and easiers for us to determine who's accountable.

Also, we could bring up in cabinet meeting that only commissioners should have access to their personal state email accounts--their secretaries should only have access to the general commissioner/department account. Just some ideas...

Wonder what he thinks he accomplishes with these kinds of constant messages (all negative)?

We need to get out ahead of this one before the announcement is made next week. As Heyworth has pointed out, Harris' tactic does nothing but set up an ugly and dramatic showdown between Hickle and our other friends - and me - leading up to next week's announcement.

Comm Dept: what's the strategy here so we're not just in a reactionary mode as Harris, et al, creates some build up for a potential showdown?

Politicians look east for natural gas customers

by Mike Ross

Monday, May 12, 2008

ANCHORAGE, Alaska -- A delegation of Alaska political figures is just back from a trip to China. Their mission was to find out if there's a market for Alaska natural gas in the Far East.

They say they'll use what they found out to put pressure on Gov. Sarah Palin in the upcoming battle over the gas pipeline project.

The group included former Gov. Wally Hickel and House Speaker John Harris, who says the trip convinced him even more that an all-Alaska gas line is the best choice.

"Alaskans would benefit more by that, by being able to sell their gas to those folks at a higher price than we could sell it to the United States," Harris said.

The Alaska political figures met in Beijing with leaders of China's giant energy company Sinopec and in Tokyo with representatives of Mitsubishi Corporation, Tokyo Electric and Tokyo Gas.

Harris says the message was the same at each stop -- the Far East is clamoring for Alaska natural gas.

"We came away with the feeling, and I think they're gonna be writing it down in a letter to the governor, that they would take all the gas we could provide as soon as we could provide it in the form of liquefied natural gas," Harris said.

Harris says Gov. Hickel hopes to meet with Gov. Palin soon to discuss the China trip and to push again for an all-Alaska pipeline project that could ship liquefied gas to domestic and foreign markets.

"Many people voted for this governor based upon the fact they thought she was gonna be an advocate for an all-Alaska gas line," Harris said. "That doesn't seem like that's the case now."

The Palin gas line team says the bid from TransCanada for a pipeline to the Lower 48 was the only proposal to meet the requirements of the governor's Alaska Gasline Inducement Act, or AGIA.

"We've said all along that (liquefied natural gas) needs to be looked at closely before we can make a decision on the TransCanada license," Revenue Commissioner Patrick Galvin said. "It has been a significant part of the analysis."

Galvin is a member of the governor's gas line team and says the all-Alaska route is still being reviewed.

"We believe that we're taking a look very even-handedly at all issues and we want to make sure our decision is one that goes to maximizing the benefits of Alaskans," Galvin said. "We're leaving the door open for all options."

Harris says after making the trip, he believes Alaska's energy future lies in the Far East, not across the Canadian prairie.

"I think a project that goes through Alaska and provides gas for Alaskans and provides jobs for Alaskans and not Canadians is the best way to go," he said. "That fight will place in another few days."

The Palin administration is scheduled to announce next week if it will recommend the TransCanada bid. State lawmakers are due back in Juneau for a special session on the gas line project early next month.

Wonder what he thinks he accomplishes with these kinds of constant messages (all negative)?

We need to get out ahead of this one before the announcement is made next week. As Heyworth has pointed out, Harris' tactic does nothing but set up an ugly and dramatic showdown between Hickle and our other friends - and me - leading up to next week's announcement.

Comm Dept: what's the strategy here so we're not just in a reactionary mode as Harris, et al, creates some build up for a potential showdown?

Politicians look east for natural gas customers

by Mike Ross

Monday, May 12, 2008

ANCHORAGE, Alaska -- A delegation of Alaska political figures is just back from a trip to China. Their mission was to find out if there's a market for Alaska natural gas in the Far East.

They say they'll use what they found out to put pressure on Gov. Sarah Palin in the upcoming battle over the gas pipeline project.

The group included former Gov. Wally Hickel and House Speaker John Harris, who says the trip convinced him even more that an all-Alaska gas line is the best choice.

"Alaskans would benefit more by that, by being able to sell their gas to those folks at a higher price than we could sell it to the United States," Harris said.

The Alaska political figures met in Beijing with leaders of China's giant energy company Sinopec and in Tokyo with representatives of Mitsubishi Corporation, Tokyo Electric and Tokyo Gas.

Harris says the message was the same at each stop -- the Far East is clamoring for Alaska natural gas.

"We came away with the feeling, and I think they're gonna be writing it down in a letter to the governor, that they would take all the gas we could provide as soon as we could provide it in the form of liquefied natural gas," Harris said.

Harris says Gov. Hickel hopes to meet with Gov. Palin soon to discuss the China trip and to push again for an all-Alaska pipeline project that could ship liquefied gas to domestic and foreign markets.

"Many people voted for this governor based upon the fact they thought she was gonna be an advocate for an all-Alaska gas line," Harris said. "That doesn't seem like that's the case now."

I think Janice can refine our distribution list to make sure it only includes commissioners and Governor's staff--any support staff for commissioners or Governor's staff should be removed. It narrows the scope of who could be leaking emails, and easiers for us to determine who's accountable.

Also, we could bring up in cabinet meeting that only commissioners should have access to their personal state email accounts--their secretaries should only have access to the general commissioner/department account. Just some ideas...

MESSAGE:

Dear Governor Sarah Palin; Greetings and congradulations ! You and your wonderful family are in our hearts and prayers. I want you to know that. I have no complaints , we are blessed and grateful! However, one small item has been of interest to me Governor and that is the downtown post office. They have a fantastic crew, they do a superb job with a cheerful heart, I respect them greatly. My focus is two-fold; first the parking lot is too restricted. Especially during peak hours and the location in regards to the density of traffic at the 4-way stop sign, builds up and hinders access in and out of the parking area. Wasilla is a fast growing city and the demands will only increase and I know you are more than aware of the situation. The second point has to do with frustrated drivers and speed, people in a hurry...add to it... impatience, and ...well I think you're already connecting the dots, as the saying goes. With so many items topping the list of priorities on your plate Governor , I am almost embarrassed to burden you with yet another concern, that is, in,the big picture, is in some ways a mere blip on the radar screen of life, we indeed count ourselves greatly blessed and you as our Governor is a huge part of the blessing.We wanted you to know that and be encouraged. God bless you and your family.Sincerely, Hank & Pat Nelson

My sense is that not every commissioner is tech savvy. That means they have staff check it for them....and since it went so widely, staff knows they can get away with leaking.

It seems like we need to have a frank discussion on thursday about whose email is secure and whose is not. In this instance, we tried to have a cabinet discussion via email and got a leak...that's not happened when discussions take place in person. Which reinforces my suspicion that it wasnt directly from the cabinet.

Chamber of the Americas CEO Gil Cisneros will lead a commercial visit to Belize from May 28th to June 2nd. Recognizing that Belize is an increasingly important player in U.S.-Latin American commerce, attracting international businesses and tourists, Cisneros is excited about the business opportunities presented in Belize. The Chamber will explore and discuss those possibilities during the commercial visit.

Belize is located at the northern tip of Central America between Mexico and Guatemala. For tourists, the country's predominant allure is its eastern coast bordering the Caribbean Sea. However, the Chamber wants to inform its membership about Belize's other commodities as well, including the country's thriving real estate market and oil industry.

"The U.S. is the biggest trading partner with Belize," said Cisneros. "There are many Colorado business people in Belize involved in real estate development and tourism. Colorado is the second largest diving state; and many of our state's residents frequent Belize. Also, the country's oil industry has been discovered by Colorado business folks."

The Chamber's membership extends well beyond Colorado, with members located in 34 states and 26 countries. Cisneros said that the Chamber wants to acquaint Belize businesses with their international counterparts and create commerce opportunities, especially in real estate, construction and the hospitality industries.

"The goal is to make the proper high-level introductions so that we may start to introduce companies to one another," said Cisneros. "The other goals include strategic partnerships with various Belize organizations, a potential sister chamber office there, and a reverse trade mission. Since Belize is a struggling country, any business we can create between companies will provide jobs for Belizeans and other members alike."

Cisneros will spearhead numerous discussions between American business representatives and Belizean dignitaries and commerce leaders during the five-day commercial visit. The itinerary includes meetings with the U.S. Ambassador to Belize Robert Dieter, Head of Corporate Banking of the First Caribbean Bank Glen Smith and Head of International Department of Atlantic Bank Ricardo Pelayo. Other meetings are scheduled with Tropic Air President Johnny Grief, Bowen, Bowen LTD President Sir Barry M. Bowen, The Belize Chamber of Commerce and Industry President Emile Mean and Town Council of San Pedro President Elsa Paz, among others.

The commercial visit participants will witness first-hand some of the country's beauty when they travel to Belize. The Chamber wants to introduce its membership not only to the nation's boardrooms, but also inform them that the tourist mecca is both aesthetically and commercially attractive.

Politicians look east for natural gas customers

by Mike Ross

Monday, May 12, 2008

ANCHORAGE, Alaska -- A delegation of Alaska political figures is just back from a trip to China. Their mission was to find out if there's a market for Alaska natural gas in the Far East.

They say they'll use what they found out to put pressure on Gov. Sarah Palin in the upcoming battle over the gas pipeline project.

The group included former Gov. Wally Hickel and House Speaker John Harris, who says the trip convinced him even more that an all-Alaska gas line is the best choice.

"Alaskans would benefit more by that, by being able to sell their gas to those folks at a higher price than we could sell it to the United States," Harris said.

The Alaska political figures met in Beijing with leaders of China's giant energy company Sinopec and in Tokyo with representatives of Mitsubishi Corporation, Tokyo Electric and Tokyo Gas.

Harris says the message was the same at each stop -- the Far East is clamoring for Alaska natural gas.

"We came away with the feeling, and I think they're gonna be writing it down in a letter to the governor, that they would take all the gas we could provide as soon as we could provide it in the form of liquefied natural gas," Harris said.

Harris says Gov. Hickel hopes to meet with Gov. Palin soon to discuss the China trip and to push again for an all-Alaska pipeline project that could ship liquefied gas to domestic and foreign markets.

"Many people voted for this governor based upon the fact they thought she was gonna be an advocate for an all-Alaska gas line," Harris said. "That doesn't seem like that's the case now."

The Palin gas line team says the bid from TransCanada for a pipeline to the Lower 48 was the only proposal to meet the requirements of the governor's Alaska Gasline Inducement Act, or AGIA.

"We've said all along that (liquefied natural gas) needs to be looked at closely before we can make a decision on the TransCanada license," Revenue Commissioner Patrick Galvin said. "It has been a significant part of the analysis."

Galvin is a member of the governor's gas line team and says the all-Alaska route is still being reviewed.

"We believe that we're taking a look very even-handedly at all issues and we want to make sure our decision is one that goes to maximizing the benefits of Alaskans," Galvin said.

"We're leaving the door open for all options."

Harris says after making the trip, he believes Alaska's energy future lies in the Far East, not across the Canadian prairie.

"I think a project that goes through Alaska and provides gas for Alaskans and provides jobs for Alaskans and not Canadians is the best way to go," he said. "That fight will place in another few days."

The Palin administration is scheduled to announce next week if it will recommend the TransCanada bid. State lawmakers are due back in Juneau for a special session on the gas line project early next month.

Dear Ms. Perez,

Please cancel my request for public records. We have a limited budget here and paying $1,250 in fees for people who already are on the state payroll is ridiculous, and frankly, a June 3 response is of little use to me.

Thank you for your time, I'll find the information elsewhere.

I agree with Tom. The folks on the distribution list from the email on Friday need to be given a very strong message that these are internal documents, and they must take personal responsibility to ensure that the messages do not go out. They can't forward messages and send them to staff, they can't have staff manage their emails, otherwise they will not be included in future discussions and they will useless in doing their jobs.

If they want to forward the request to staff, they need to take the time to write their own email to staff, which does not carry on the chain of previous emails. Also, if they choose to send it to staff, they bear all the responsibility to ensure that the staff understands that outside release of the information will not be tolerated. This is not being secretive or non-'open and transparent', it is simply to make sure the public gets a full clear message and not misinformation because things come out in dribs and drabs.

Usually, this type of protocol enforcement is done by the Chief of Staff. Is this something Mike can do on Thursday?

We talked about this last night. One likely possibility is it came from the request Steve sent to all the Commissioners asking for suggestions on energy. This got a wide distribution.

We need to make sure all commissioners have a method where only they have access to certain draft emails and they keep in progress, draft ideas confidential. Maybe we can comment on it to a Commissioner only, no staff portion of a Cabinet meeting.

As a side note: I am making a quick trip to Fairbanks this morning so I can attend Christopher's 8th grade graduation. Will be back later this afternoon. God bless. Tom
